Swindon 'croc' set to return

A group of young people have got their claws into the task of bringing Swindon's famous gharial back to Museum & Art Swindon (MAS).

Working alongside the team at MAS, the group have been busy behind the scenes to make sure the gharial can be put back on display for everyone to enjoy, while also explaining the reptile's complex history.

Since it was given to the Council in 1931, the gharial (fondly known as the 'Swindon Croc') has been displayed in a number of exhibitions. However, it is yet to appear in its new home after being sent for some much-needed restoration work and to allow the MAS team to put together its own dedicated
