Along with staff from the Wyvern and Swindon Arts Centre, licensees, bar and security staff from the Power Lounge, Kioki and Tawny Owl also joined the session, with a further session planned in Swindon later this year.

John Barker is the Police Alcohol Licensing Officer for Swindon:

"WAVE training is a crucial tool to help venues become as safe and secure as possible. It also covers Ask for Angela, spiking and violence against women and girls.

"It is great to see so many of the Swindon venues and Swindon Pubwatch actively partaking in this training and working in partnership with the police, council and door staff companies.

"All the venues have also signed up to the Safety At Night Charter and this shows their overall commitment to help in the key licensing objectives of preventing crime and disorder and public safety.

"This will make the Swindon night-time economy as safe and enjoyable as possible. Both to keep everyone safer and make everyone feel safer."
